

INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL YOUTH SYMPOSIUM 2015

ONE WORLD / ONE ENVIRONMENT

As technology takes a greater presence in our everyday lives and the effects of climate change are seen regularly in our community, it makes sense for a global conversation to be initiated among our youth. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and its Global Partners would like to invite you to participate in the first ever, International Youth Environmental Symposium 2015. Centered on the theme of “One World, One Environment,” the International Youth Environmental Symposium will be held at the Sam Nunn Atlanta Federal Center on October 2, 2015. The Symposium aims to connect students and scholars from across disciplines and cultures to form lasting networks of research and governance. Together with current stakeholders from universities, government and the industry, participants will discuss the problems of today to find the solutions of tomorrow. The Symposium will also host environmentally related speakers from the global sectors (Germany, France, China, South Africa, Brazil, and Italy), academia, industry, and the EPA. This Symposium is open to academic deans and college and university faculty, students, government, and industry.

A major feature of the symposium is the Sustainable Research and Poster Competition Presentation for High School and College Students. This year, judges will look at topics of interest submissions in the following category:

Climate Change: Adaptation, Resiliency, and Mitigation

Topics of Interest:

- 1: Technical Environmentalism (Green Apps)
- 2: Sustainable and Renewable Energy
- 3: Water Degradation/Coastal Impacts and Watershed Management
- 4: Urban Systems in the Environment
- 5: Sustainable Agriculture
- 6. Mitigation of Health Effects due to Climate Change

Also, due to demands from the previous year, we have added an essay category for high school students. See attachment.
